
Principles and Guidelines, supported by practical guidance, on the human rights protection of migrants in vulnerable situations within large and/or mixed movements

- Draft November 2016-

“We take note of the work of the Global Migration Group to develop principles and practical guidance on the protection of the human rights of migrants in vulnerable situations.” (New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants, para. 51)

“We will consider developing non-binding principles and voluntary guidelines, consistent with international law, on the treatment of migrants in vulnerable situations (especially unaccompanied and separated children) who do not qualify for international protection as refugees and who may need assistance. These guiding principles and guidelines will be developed using a State-led process with the involvement of all relevant stakeholders and with the input from the Special Representative of the Secretary General on International Migration, the International Organization for Migration, OHCHR, UNHCR and other relevant UN entities. These would complement national efforts to protect and assist migrants.” (New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants, para. 52)

Members of the GMG Working Group on Human Rights and Gender Equality include ILO, IOM, OHCHR, UNESCO, UNHCR, UNICEF, UNODC, UNU, UN Women and WHO. The group is co-chaired by OHCHR and UN Women.

Introduction

Background

Around the world, many millions of migrants¹ and refugees are in a precarious human rights situation including in the context of large and/or mixed movements.

While migration can be a positive and empowering experience for individuals and communities and can benefit countries of origin, transit and destination, it is clear that perilous and unprotected movements of people are a serious human rights concern. Although they might fall outside the specific legal category of a refugee², migrants in these large movements may need particular attention to the respect, protection and fulfilment of their human rights, including because of the conditions they are leaving behind and/or the circumstances in which they are compelled to move and to which they arrive.

The UN Secretary General notes in this regard that “The gradual expansion of refugee protection notwithstanding, many people are compelled to leave their homes for reasons that do not fall within the refugee definition in the 1951 Convention”.³ The New York Declaration on refugees and migrants recognises the complex reasons for contemporary movement; *“Since earliest times, humanity has been on the move. Some people move in search of new economic opportunities and horizons. Others move to escape armed conflict, poverty, food insecurity, persecution, terrorism, or human rights violations and abuses. Still others do so in response to the adverse effects of climate change, natural disasters (some of which may be linked to climate change) or other environmental factors. Many move, indeed, for a combination of these reasons.”*⁴ It is these people on the move and these situations of movement that are the focus of the current Principles and Guidelines supported by Practical Guidance.

¹ In the absence of a universal, legal definition, OHCHR has defined an “international migrant” as “any person who is outside a State of which he or she is a citizen or national, or, in the case of a stateless person, his or her State of birth or habitual residence.” See OHCHR, Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights at International Borders (2014) chap. I, para. 10. IOM defines a migrant as any person who is moving or has moved across an international border or within a State away from his/her habitual place of residence, regardless of (1) the person’s legal status; (2) whether the movement is voluntary or involuntary; (3) what the causes for the movement are; or (4) what the length of the stay is. Some categories of migrants are defined in international instruments, particularly “migrant worker” or “migrant for employment” which are defined in the 1990 UN Convention on Migrant Workers (Article 2(1)); ILO Convention No. 97, Migration for Employment Convention (Revised), Article 11; ILO Convention No. 143, Migrant Workers (Supplementary Provisions) Convention, Article 11.

² As defined in Article 1 A(2) of the 1951 Refugee Convention: a refugee as a person who “owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it.” Note in this respect that some individuals who are entitled to refugee status will not be able to prove their refugee status, including because they lack access to the procedure, because they lack legal representation, because of the consequences of accelerated asylum procedures, or other reasons. As refugee status is declaratory, however, they should be recognised as refugees, and are not the primary subjects of the present guidance.

For many migrants, the journey towards their intended destination could take weeks, months or even years. Some may not complete their migrations, for a range of reasons including substantial delays effectively turning transit into destination or fatalities en route. Their route, means of transportation, and even their intended destination can change at different phases along the migration trajectory and an individual's need for human rights' protection can change – often dramatically – in the course of their journey.

Recognising that all people on the move are rights-holders entitled to the equal protection of their rights under international human rights law and related standards, it is important to uphold existing protections for specific groups established in international law. Refugees are entitled to specific protection under international refugee law, including protection from return to persecution under Article 33 of the 1951 Refugee Convention.⁵ The human rights and particular needs of other groups of individuals, such as trafficked persons, migrant workers and persons with disabilities have similarly been recognised in specific international instruments.⁶ The development of principles, guidelines and practical guidance is thus without prejudice to the specific rights of particular groups who are part of such movements.⁷

When the international community adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) on 10 December 1948 it was accepted as “a common standard of achievement for all peoples and nations”, spelling out for the first time in human history the minimum civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights that all human beings should enjoy.⁸ The international bill of rights (Universal

⁸ Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), Preamble. In relation to large and/or mixed movements of migrants, States have affirmed in the New York Declaration that “We are committed to protecting the safety, dignity and human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants, regardless of their migratory status at all times,” and that this applies “support to those affected today as well as to those who will be part of future large movements”, General Assembly, New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants, Outcome document of the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on addressing large movements of refugees and migrants, A/71/L.1, 13 September 2016, paras.41 and 11, respectively. See also OHCHR, “Human rights are for all, even for migrants” – Rights experts remind participants to upcoming UN Summit: UN Summit on Refugees and Declaration of Human Rights, International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights) makes exceptions between nationals and non-nationals in respect of only two rights, and even then only in limited circumstances.⁹

Human rights are universal, inalienable, indivisible and interdependent.¹⁰ The international human rights framework is clear that in order to give effect to these rights and to uphold the fundamental principle of non-discrimination, the unique and individual circumstances of each person must be considered by duty-bearers.¹¹ By becoming parties to international human rights treaties, States assume obligations under international law and undertake to put into place domestic measures and legislation compatible with their treaty obligations.¹² These obligations have practical consequences for municipal authorities and local governments that may be required by domestic law to uphold them. States are also responsible for the human rights consequences of the actions, or failure to act, of private actors – including corporations, civil society actors, private security contractors – if they failed to take appropriate steps to prevent human rights abuses they knew or should have known about, or to investigate and punish these abuses, and provide compensation.

The concept of a ‘migrant in a vulnerable situation’

The concept of a ‘migrant in a vulnerable situation’ may be understood as a range of factors that are often intersecting, that can co-exist simultaneously, and can compound and change migrants’ experiences. These inform migrants’ experiences through the movements that are the subject of these principles, guidelines and practical guidance.¹³ The factors that create a vulnerable situation for migrants might be what drives the migration, occur in transit, or be related to a particular aspect of a person’s identity or circumstance:¹⁴

Migrants, 16 September 2016, available at <http://www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=20518&LangID=E>

⁹ The ICCPR makes clear that the duty-bearer in general is the state in whose territory a person is located, obliging states “to respect and to ensure to all individuals within its territory and subject to its jurisdiction the rights recognized in the present Covenant, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status”. Article 25 of the ICCPR reserves to citizens the right to vote and take part in public affairs, and in article 12 reserves the right to freedom of movement within a country to foreigners who are lawfully present within the country. However, in its General Comment No. 15, the Human Rights Committee has guided that a foreigner may enjoy the protection of article 12 of ICCPR even in relation to entry or residence, for example, when considerations of non-discrimination, prohibition of inhuman treatment and respect for family life arise.

¹¹ Duty-bearers are those obligated or responsible for making sure rights-holders are enjoying their rights.

¹² States assume obligations and duties under international law to respect, to protect and to fulfil human rights. The obligation to respect means that States must refrain from interfering with or curtailing the enjoyment of human rights. The obligation to protect requires States to protect individuals and groups against human rights abuses. The obligation to fulfil means that States must take positive action to facilitate the enjoyment of human rights. ¹³ Human Rights Council, Promotion and protection of the human rights of migrants in the context of large movements: Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/33/67, 13 October 2016.

¹⁴ It is important to note that in migrating people show considerable resilience and agency to support themselves and their families. The vulnerable situations migrants face have often been created for them by others, on the basis of discriminations, and through law, policy and practice. See, Human Rights Council, Promotion and protection of the human rights of migrants in the context of large movements: Report of the

- A vulnerable situation arising from the reasons for leaving countries of origin: The drivers for ‘non-voluntary’ precarious movements are multiple and often intertwined, and should be assessed on an individual basis. They can include poverty, discrimination, lack of access to fundamental human rights, including education, health, food and water, decent work, as well as violence, gender inequality, the wide-ranging consequences of natural disaster, climate change and environmental degradation, and separation from family. The New York Declaration highlights in addition that “many move, indeed, for a combination of these reasons” (para 1).
- A vulnerable situation occurring in the context of the situation encountered by migrants en route, at borders and in the context of reception: People are often compelled to utilise dangerous means of transportation in hazardous conditions, and to resort to the use of smugglers and other types of facilitators which can place them in situations of exploitation, at risk of trafficking and other abuse. This journey can be marked by hunger, deprivation of water, a lack of personal security as well as of access to medical care. Many migrants can spend long durations in transit countries, often in irregular and precarious conditions, unable to access justice and at risk of a range of human rights violations and abuse. The inadequate and often harsh conditions in which they are received at borders can also violate rights and further exacerbate vulnerabilities. Responses such as arbitrary closure of borders, denial of access to asylum procedures, arbitrary push-backs, increasing violence at borders by State authorities and other actors (including criminals and civilian militias), inhumane reception conditions, and denial of humanitarian assistance increase risks to the health and safety of migrants.
- A vulnerable situation related to a specific aspect of a person’s identity or circumstance: As they move, some people are more at risk of human rights violations than others due to their persisting unequal treatment and discrimination based on factors including age, gender, ethnicity, nationality, religion, language, sexual orientation or gender identity, or migration status, singly or in combination. Certain people such as pregnant women, persons with poor health conditions including those with HIV, persons with disabilities, older persons, or children (including unaccompanied or separated children) are more at risk due to their physical and/or psychological conditions.

Principles and practical guidance

This document provides a concise draft set of principles, guidelines, and practical guidance on protection of human rights in large and/or mixed movements, with a particular emphasis on the human rights protection gaps experienced by migrants in vulnerable situations. In other words, the framework below attempts to provide guidance to States and other stakeholders on how to implement obligations and duties to respect, protect and fulfil the rights of those persons who are moving in vulnerable situations within large and/or mixed movements who might not fulfil the conditions of the refugee definition.

The principles are drawn directly from international human rights law and related standards (including international labour law, refugee law, criminal law, humanitarian law, and the law of the sea), including in relation to the rights of specific groups in such movements including children, persons with disabilities, women at risk, and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and intersex (LGBTI) individuals. The guidelines are derived from international human rights law, authoritative interpretations or recommendations by the international human rights treaty bodies and special procedures of the Human Rights Council as well as other expert sources where relevant.¹⁵

The principles, guidelines, and practical guidance are designed to assist States and other stakeholders with regard to the development, strengthening, implementation and monitoring of measures to protect the rights of migrants in vulnerable situations and in large or mixed movements. Each principle identified below is followed by a set of related practical interventions that could be taken by States, and other stakeholders as relevant, to give practical effect to the principle and address protection gaps in this regard. These Principle and Guidelines are not necessarily exhaustive, and should be understood holistically: the principles and their associated guidelines are interrelated and inform each other.

The examples of practical guidance should be read as suggested ideas to encourage human rights-based practice based on the guidance provided in the principles and guidelines. The Global Migration Group has not independently assessed any of the examples included in this report and is not in a position to verify their human rights impact.

Definitions

Asylum seeker	An asylum seeker is any person who has applied for protection as a refugee and is awaiting the determination of their status.
Border governance	The terms 'border governance' and 'border governance measures' include but are not limited to legislation, policies, plans, strategies, action plans and activities related to the entry into and exit of persons from the territory of the State, including detection, rescue, interception, screening, interviewing, identification, reception, detention, removal, expulsion, or return, as well as related activities such as training, technical, financial and other assistance, including that provided to other States. ¹⁶
Firewalls	Measures to effectively separate immigration enforcement activities from public service provision by State and non-State actors as well as from criminal justice measures for victims of crime, so as not to deny

¹⁶ OHCHR Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights at International Borders, A/69/CRP. 1, 23 July 2014.

human rights to persons in irregular status.¹⁷ They are “designed to ensure, particularly, that immigration enforcement authorities are not able to access information concerning the immigration status of individuals who seek assistance or services at, for example, medical facilities, schools, and other social service institutions. Relatedly, firewalls ensure that such institutions do not have an obligation to inquire or share information about their clients’ immigration status.”¹⁸ They are also needed between labour law enforcement and immigration law enforcement to ensure access to remedy, including compensation for abuses of rights of migrant workers.¹⁹

Firewalls recognize that “other legitimate interests, such as fundamental rights, public health concerns, fighting crime, legal certainty, as well as social policy considerations, should also be taken into account when enforcing immigration law”.²⁰

Human Rights Defenders

Human rights defender (HRD) is a term used to describe people who, individually or with others, act to promote or protect human rights. There is no specific definition of who is or can be a human rights defender.²¹ A person or group need not necessarily self-identify as a “human rights defender” to constitute one.

In these Principles and Guidelines, “human rights defender” should be read as specifically including HRDs working with migrants within large and/or mixed movements, including those providing humanitarian assistance.

Large movements	The Secretary General’s report on addressing large movements of refugees and migrants asserts that “Whether a movement is characterized as ‘large’ depends less on the absolute number of people moving than on its geographical context, the receiving States’ capacities to respond, and the impact caused by its sudden or prolonged nature on the receiving country.”²² The New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants elaborates further, that: “‘Large movements’ may be understood to reflect a number of considerations, including: the number of people arriving; the economic, social and geographical context; the capacity of a receiving State to respond; and the impact of a movement which is sudden or prolonged. The term does not, for example, cover regular flows of migrants from one country to another. ‘Large movements’ may involve mixed flows of people, whether refugees or migrants, who move for different reasons but who may use similar routes.”²³
Migrants	In the absence of a universal, legal definition, in these principles and guidelines “international migrant” refers to “any person who is outside a State of which he or she is a citizen or national, or, in the case of a stateless person, his or her State of birth or habitual residence.”²⁴ In these Principles and Guidelines, “migrants” should be read with specific reference to migrants within large and/or mixed movements.
Mixed migration	There is no official/agreed definition of mixed migration. The term describes the reality of movements of people with varying protection profiles, reasons and needs – including refugees, asylum-seekers, other migrants including those who are in an irregular situation, trafficked persons, unaccompanied and separated children – moving along the same routes, using the same transport or means of travel,

²⁴ This definition was established by OHCHR, see OHCHR, Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights at International Borders (2014) chap. I, para. 10. IOM defines a migrant as any person who is moving or has moved across an international border or within a State away from his/her habitual place of residence, regardless of (1) the person’s legal status; (2) whether the movement is voluntary or involuntary; (3) what the causes for the movement are; or (4) what the length of the stay is. Some categories of migrants are defined in international instruments, particularly “migrant worker” or “migrant for employment” which are defined in the 1990 UN Convention on Migrant Workers (Article 2(1)); ILO Convention No. 97, Migration for Employment Convention (Revised), Article 11; ILO Convention No. 143, Migrant Workers (Supplementary Provisions) Convention, Article 11. UNHCR always refers to ‘refugees’ and ‘migrants’ separately, to maintain clarity about the causes and character of refugee movements and not to lose sight of the specific obligations owed to refugees under international law.

Non-refoulement	All individuals, regardless of migration status, have the right not to be returned to their country of origin or extradited to another State where there are substantial grounds for believing that a person risks being subject to serious violations of their human rights, either in the country to which they would be removed or in any country to which the person may subsequently be removed. International standards and jurisprudence of international bodies have identified breaches of this obligation in relation to the risk of being subject to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, the death penalty, extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, flagrant denial of justice and flagrant denial of the right to liberty. ²⁶
Refugee	A refugee is a person who “owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it.” ²⁷
Separated children	Children who have been separated from both parents or from their previous legal or customary primary care-giver, but not necessarily from other relatives and are not being cared for by an adult who, by law or custom, is responsible for doing so. Children may become separated at any point of their migration. ²⁸
Statelessness	A stateless person is defined in article 1 (1) of the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons as someone who is “not considered as a national by any State under the operation of its law”. ²⁹

²⁶ Non-refoulement is a jus cogens principle. See Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, Article 3; Human Rights Committee, General Comment No. 31: The Nature of the General Legal Obligation Imposed on States Parties to the Covenant, CCPR/C/21/Rev.1/Add. 13, 26 May 2004, para.12; Sir Elihu Lauterpacht and Daniel Bethlehem, The Scope and Content of the Principle of Non-Refoulement: Opinion, UNHCR, 20 June 2001 and further discussion under Principle 6.

Unaccompanied children	Children who have been separated from both parents and other relatives and are not being cared for by an adult who, by law or custom, is responsible for doing so. Children may become unaccompanied at any point of their migration. ³⁰
Xenophobia	The term lacks a universal, legal definition and has commonly been used to describe attitudes, prejudices and behaviour that reject, exclude and often vilify persons, based on the reality or perception that they are outsiders or foreigners to the community, society or national identity. ³¹

The Principles

- Principle 1: Ensure that human rights are at the centre of addressing large and/or mixed movements of migrants
- Principle 2: Counter discrimination in all its forms against migrants
- Principle 3: Protect the lives and safety of migrants and ensure rescue and immediate assistance to all migrants facing risks to life or safety
- Principle 4: Ensure access to justice for migrants
- Principle 5: Ensure that all border governance measures protect the human right to freedom of movement and the right of all persons to leave any country including their own, recognising that States have legitimate interests in exercising immigration controls
- Principle 6: Ensure that all returns, deportations, removals and readmissions are only carried out in full respect for the human rights of migrants and in accordance with international law, including upholding the principle of non-refoulement, the prohibition of arbitrary or collective expulsion, the right to private and family life, the best interests of the child, as well as the right to seek asylum
- Principle 7: Protect migrants from all forms of violence and exploitation, whether inflicted by institutions, officials, or by private individuals, entities or groups
- Principle 8: Uphold the right of migrants to liberty and prohibition of arbitrary detention through making efforts to end immigration detention of migrants. Never detain children on account of their migration status or that of their parents
- Principle 9: Ensure the widest protection of the family unity of migrants, facilitating family reunification, and preventing arbitrary or unlawful interference in the right of migrants to the enjoyment of private and family life
- Principle 10: Guarantee the human rights of all children in the context of migration, and ensure that they are treated as children first and foremost

- Principle 11: Protect the human rights of migrant women and girls
- Principle 12: Ensure the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health of all migrants
- Principle 13: Safeguard the right of migrants to an adequate standard of living
- Principle 14: Guarantee the right of migrants to work, in just and favourable conditions
- Principle 15: Protect the right of migrants to education, including primary and secondary education as well as higher education and vocational and language training
- Principle 16: Uphold migrants' right to information through ensuring they are provided accessible, reliable, relevant and accurate information on their situation and rights
- Principle 17: Guarantee monitoring and accountability in all responses to large and/or mixed movements of migrants, including through protecting the right of migrants to appropriate and effective remedies
- Principle 18: Respect and support the activities of human rights defenders and others working to rescue and provide assistance to migrants
- Principle 19: Improve the collection of disaggregated data on the human rights situation of migrants, while ensuring the right to privacy and protection of personal data
- Principle 20: Build capacity and promote cooperation amongst and between all relevant stakeholders to ensure a gender-responsive and human rights-based approach to migration governance and to understand and address the drivers of the movement of migrants in a vulnerable situation

Principle 1: Ensure that human rights are at the centre of addressing large and/or mixed movements of migrants

Guidelines:

1. Ratify and implement all international and regional human right instruments and reaffirm in policy and practice the fundamental importance of respecting, protecting and fulfilling the human rights of all migrants who leave their countries, regardless of their migratory status.³²

³² The international bill of rights (Universal Declaration of Human Rights, International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights) makes exceptions between nationals and non-nationals in respect of only two rights, and only then in limited circumstances, see discussion above at note 9. See also, Human Rights Council, Protection of the human rights of migrants: strengthening the promotion and protection of the human rights of migrants, including in large movements, A/HRC/32/L.22, 28 June 2016; Human Rights Council, Report of the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants: Regional study: management of the external borders of the European Union and its impact on the human rights of migrants, A/HRC/23/46, 24 April 2013, paras.36, 42, 82. Similarly, there is acceptance in international law that international treaties apply to all individuals within the territory of a State, see Declaration on the Human Rights of Individuals Who are not Nationals of the Countries in which they Live,

2. Ensure legislation and other measures of migration governance are consistent with States' obligations under international human rights law and do not adversely affect the full enjoyment of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants, without any kind of discrimination, including due to migration status.³³ Undertake due diligence prior to adopting new policies on migration including human rights impact assessments, including consultation with all relevant stakeholders, including migrants themselves. Immediately suspend, review and amend or repeal any laws or associated policies and practices that have negative consequences or disproportionate impact on the human rights of migrants in large and/or mixed movements.³⁴
3. Promote and support action to prevent statelessness, recognising that statelessness can be a gendered phenomenon, and ensure that all children are able to acquire a nationality.³⁵
4. Ensure that the irregular entry and/or stay of migrants are not considered a criminal offence, given that border crossing, management of residence and work permits are administrative issues. Any administrative sanctions applied to irregular entry should be proportionate, necessary and reasonable.³⁶ Ensure migrants are issued with identity documentation necessary to secure their rights, and do not punish migrants where they are unable to provide such documentation. Ensure that migrants are not liable for criminal prosecution for having used the services of smugglers.³⁷

5. Ensure appropriate laws and procedures are in place and implemented for human rights and humanitarian actors to have the necessary access to all migrants to conduct assessments, provide assistance, and document human rights violations.
6. Take the measures necessary to achieve policy coherence on all human rights aspects of migration at the local, national, regional and international levels through a sustainable whole-of-government approach.³⁸

Principle 2: Counter discrimination in all its forms against migrants.

1. Elaborate and implement legal measures, in conformity with international human rights standards, that protect migrants, regardless of their status or circumstance, from multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination throughout their migration.³⁹ Ensure that non-discrimination provisions in legislation are applicable to all migration governance measures for migrants in large and/or mixed movements, consistent with international human rights standards. Review these procedures to ensure compliance with international human rights standards including the principle of non-discrimination and adopt or amend legislation to ensure

³⁹ The principle of non-discrimination is central to all international human rights instruments (see Annex). The rights guaranteed in international human rights treaties apply to everyone, including migrants and other non-nationals, without discrimination of any kind as to race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, including immigration status. It is also an important principle and right at work as expressed in two of the ILO fundamental Conventions: Equal Remuneration Convention, 1951 (No. 100) and Discrimination (Employment and Occupation) Convention, 1958 (No. 111). See also the Resolution concerning a fair deal for migrant workers in a global economy, International Labour Conference, 92nd Session, 2004, para. 28: "It is important to ensure that the human rights of irregular migrant workers are protected. It should be recalled that ILO instruments apply to all workers, including irregular migrant workers, unless otherwise stated", available at http://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---ed_protect/---protrav/---migrant/documents/genericdocument/wcms_178658.pdf. the effective accountability of private actors engaged by the State in the response to these movements.⁴⁰

2. Repeal or amend any laws or other measures that may give rise to any kind of discrimination against migrants or anyone perceived to be a migrant.⁴¹ Strongly condemn and take effective measures against all acts, manifestations and expressions of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against migrants and the stereotypes applied to them, including on the basis of religion or belief, and other intersecting forms of discrimination including age and gender. Eradicate impunity by holding accountable those who commit such acts, including politicians, opinion-leaders and the media, and enable victims to access justice, including through accessible complaint mechanisms, and ensuring effective remedies.⁴² Provide locally-rooted campaigns that focus on supporting migrants and host communities and which aim to build empathy and solidarity and to confront prejudice, stigmatisation, and the exclusion of migrants.⁴⁶

5. Create or strengthen independent institutions and mechanisms, such as specialised national bodies, including National Human Rights Institutions or Ombudspersons, to monitor and report on all forms of discrimination against migrants.⁴⁷

Principle 3:

Protect the lives and safety of migrants and ensure rescue and immediate assistance to all migrants facing risks to life or safety.

Guidelines:

1. Establish, operate and maintain adequate, effective services for search and rescue at sea.⁴⁸ Ensure these search and rescue services operate under a broad understanding of distress, for example rescuing any unseaworthy vessels even if not in immediate danger of sinking, and are proactive, patrolling at-risk zones, with the sole objective to save lives. Ensure that all possible resources of the States are mobilised for search and rescue when the presence of migrants in international, contiguous and/or territorial waters, is considered likely according to informed risk assessments.
2. In keeping with the priority in this context to save lives, make every effort to protect the right to life of people who are migrating, including through inhospitable or dangerous land or other routes such as rivers or lakes, by resourcing the necessary assistance such as rescue services and equipment such as rescue beacons. Ensure individuals are free from acts and omissions intended or expected to cause their unnatural or premature death, as well as their legitimate expectation to enjoy a dignified existence.⁴⁹

3. Establish pre-identified and adapted places of arrival/disembarkation allowing for reception and assistance which meets human rights and humanitarian standards, including adequate medical screening, vulnerability assessments, first psychological aid.⁵⁰ Humanitarian assistance must not be conditioned on border control, police or other enforcement procedures.
4. Ensure assistance is provided free of any kind of discrimination, including on the basis nationality, status, the motives for seeking to cross international borders, or the circumstances in which migrants have travelled or are found.⁵¹ Provide assistance without discrimination and in a disability-, age- and gender-responsive and culturally appropriate manner to migrants, including medical care, adequate food and water, blankets, clothing, dignity kits, sanitary items, and opportunity to rest.
5. Ensure that the legal frameworks and the international, multilateral, and bilateral agreements with neighbouring countries on competences on search and rescue zones fully ensure the effectiveness of search and rescue operations.
6. Provide training to those responsible for carrying out rescue and providing assistance to sensitize border authorities on the primacy of their obligations to protect human rights including migrants' lives and safety, address particular protection and assistance needs, and ensure the human rights and dignity of all persons rescued.⁵²
7. Develop guidelines and implement agreements with national protection bodies and other relevant actors to ensure timely and effective referrals for migrants in particular situations of vulnerability, including prioritising shipwreck survivors and survivors of trauma, torture and sexual and gender-based violence, for access to protection and assistance, in particular psychological and emotional support following their rescue.⁵³ Put in place measures to respond to the special needs of children, whether they are travelling unaccompanied, have been separated from or are travelling with family/guardians.⁵⁴

8. Ensure those individuals and organisations providing search and rescue assistance to migrants are not criminalised or otherwise punished for doing so, including through modifying existing legislation as necessary.⁵⁵
9. Establish and support public policies and other efforts aimed at searching for people who have gone missing or died on their journey and facilitate recovery, identification and transfer of human remains and notification of families, both at the national and transnational levels, including granting relatives the right to access to justice and, if appropriate, effective redress.

Principle 4: Ensure access to justice for migrants

Guidelines:

1. Develop or strengthen existing measures to provide competent, independent, free and confidential legal and other material assistance to migrants, regardless of status. Ensure measures are gender-responsive and child-sensitive. Measures should include any necessary information and translation/interpretation services to enable migrants to: understand their rights, obligations and any applicable procedures under criminal, administrative or labour justice processes, access victim support services, and receive and follow due process and access justice, including the right to asylum, to an individual examination, a judicial and effective remedy, and the right to appeal.⁵⁶

⁵³ In the context of migrants in large and/or mixed flows this may include children, youth, minorities, indigenous peoples, refugees, stateless persons, trafficked persons, persons with disabilities, LGBTI people, older persons, and women and girls exposed to multiple risks [press release for the World Humanitarian Summit: <http://www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=20003&LangID=E>]. ⁵⁶ International human rights and labour treaties contain guarantees relating to the right of access to courts and tribunals and equality before them. See for example, Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Articles 7 and 8; International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Articles 2(1), 3, 14 and 26; the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Articles 2(2) and 3; Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of

2. Strengthen or establish official mechanisms and/or procedures to monitor, receive and investigate allegations, and provide adequate, and effective, prompt and appropriate judicial and other remedies, including reparation, for human rights violations and abuse to all migrants, irrespective of status, and including the family of migrants who went missing or were killed in the course of the migration. Ensure the gender balance of such mechanisms corresponds with that of the migrant population. Reparation should be proportional to the gravity of the violations and the harm suffered.⁵⁷
3. Take measures to assist migrants who might be excluded, marginalized or stigmatized on the grounds of gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, ethnicity, disability, religion, migration or residence status, age, or other factors, in gaining equal and effective access to justice, and to prevent acts of discrimination or violence by the State or private actors against them on these grounds.⁵⁸ Ensure that dependent migration status is not a barrier to seeking or obtaining protection, support, or justice.⁵⁹

4. Develop clear and binding procedures and standards on the establishment of firewalls between law enforcement and criminal justice actors, labour inspectors and immigration enforcement authorities or private actors, and ensure their implementation in practice.⁶⁰
5. Ensure migrants, including child migrants, have the right to independent and effective legal assistance and representation on an individual basis in legal proceedings that affect them, including during any related hearing, with quality legal aid made available without any cost to them as required by international standards, without discrimination and establishing special measures as necessary.⁶¹

6. Establish mechanisms to ensure migrants who are victims of or witnesses to crimes in the course of migration are able to participate in legal proceedings, give evidence and testify whether they are in the jurisdiction of the prosecuting State or not, and without fear of expulsion if they are.⁶²
7. Ensure that judges, lawyers and prosecutors who are involved or may become involved in proceedings relating to migrants are aware of relevant international human rights law and standards, and respect and fulfil their roles to uphold and protect the human rights of migrants. Ensure that the judiciary, legal profession and prosecutorial services are enabled to fulfil this role, including through the legal and practical guarantees of independence and impartiality provided for by international human rights law and standards.⁶³

Principle 5:

Ensure that all border governance measures protect the human right to freedom of movement and the right of all persons to leave any country including their own, recognising that States have legitimate interests in exercising immigration controls.

Guidelines:

1. Protect the right of all persons to leave any country including their own, and ensure migration- and border- governance legislation, measures and practices are human rights-compliant and gender-responsive and do not adversely impact on the human rights and dignity of migrants, regardless of migration status or any other factor.⁶⁴

2. Ensure that emigration is not criminalised and that no migrant is criminalised for crossing a border irregularly or with the help of a facilitator.⁶⁵
3. Prohibit disproportionate and unlawful border governance measures and facilitate border crossings, including by establishing landing points for safe disembarkation.⁶⁶ Prohibit excessive use of force and dangerous border control practices such as water-hosing, use of fences and the use of dogs against migrants. Ensure there are no arbitrary and collective expulsions, including through tow-backs or push-backs, in all areas where the State exercises jurisdiction or effective control including outside the territory of the expelling State, at border areas and on the high seas.⁶⁷
4. Implement as an urgent priority individual screening and assessment procedures to ensure identification of protection needs or situation of vulnerability. Screening should, as relevant, be prior to, apart from, or alongside interviews to establish an asylum claim. Ensure sufficient numbers of competent experts present at borders to establish and deliver timely referral procedures.⁶⁸

5. Ensure border authorities only confiscate migrants' personal property when duly authorised by law and in accordance with international human rights standards in clearly defined, limited circumstances. In the case that the confiscation of belongings is allowed, States should establish clear procedures for their return.⁶⁹
6. Provide training for border authorities and other officials, including of municipal authorities and local governments, in contact with migrants on their obligations to respect, protect and fulfil the human rights of migrants and on migration experiences and abuses that can occur throughout the migration process. Use training materials that are human rights-based border- and migrant-specific and take into account the different risk factors and human rights violations that may be experienced by different groups of migrants.⁷⁰

7. Take all reasonable measures to minimise the duration for which migrants are delayed at borders or other crossing points on their journey. Provide adequate humanitarian assistance during border procedures and delays, including access to shelter, water and sanitation facilities, food and medical care.
8. Establish mechanisms in the context of entry and expulsion decisions to allow adequate time to assess the individual situation of all migrants, without discrimination, and with competent legal advice, representation, support, and access to all documents related to the case, including in order to properly identify individual protection needs and status and to arrange appropriate referral. Prevent or suspend any expulsion until such an assessment has been completed or an appeal against any negative decision has been completed.⁷¹
9. Ensure that the right of any person to return to their own country is respected in law and in practice and that nationality is not arbitrarily deprived or travel documents are not annulled in order to undermine the enjoyment of this right.⁷²

10. Ensure that human rights violations at the border are promptly and properly investigated and that migrants have access to complaints mechanisms and redress. In this and other border governance concerns, follow OHCHR's Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights at International Borders.⁷³

Principle 6:

Ensure that all returns, deportations, removals and readmissions are only carried out in full respect for the human rights of migrants and in accordance with international law, including upholding the principle of non-refoulement, the prohibition of arbitrary or collective expulsion, the right to private and family life, the best interests of the child, as well as the right to seek asylum.

Guidelines:

1. Ensure any consent given to voluntary return processes is fully informed and given free of any coercion, including the actual or imputed prospect of indefinite or arbitrary detention or detention in inadequate conditions.⁷⁴
2. Develop mechanisms in the context of entry and expulsion decisions for qualified personnel to substantively assess the individual situation of all migrants, without discrimination, in order to properly assess their risks, situation and rights, and allow adequate time to conduct this assessment.⁷⁵ Ensure adequate procedural safeguards are made available to migrants regarding these decisions, including the provision of justification for the removal order in writing in a language and format the migrant can understand, the provision of information on the remedies available, and time to challenge the decision and secure remedy.⁷⁶
3. Ensure the relevant judicial and administrative authorities are made aware of and implement the legal obligation to ensure that no person is returned to a place where there are substantial grounds to believe that they would be at risk of torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, or other serious human rights violations or irreparable harm, including: threats to their liberty and security of person, lack of necessary medical care or other risk to life, living conditions contrary to human dignity in cases in which the person is unable to cater for their basic needs, serious forms of discrimination, where expulsions would constitute arbitrary interference with migrants' right to family and private life, or the risk of onward refoulement.⁷⁷ Ensure anti-smuggling measures and measures to manage irregular migration, from interdiction at sea, to the creation of special zones at airports, to 'safe third country' arrangements, do not breach the obligation of non-refoulement.⁷⁸

4. Make every effort to secure the sustainability of returns by mitigating the risks returnees face upon arrival in countries of origin. Realise this by implementing measures including ensuring their equal enjoyment of human rights, including with regard to social protection, health care, an adequate standard of living, education and decent work, and diversity-responsive reintegration programmes.⁷⁹ Ensure returns are not to areas of high risk of repeated extreme weather or and slow onset events. Create independent reporting structures for potential or actual human right violations during and/or after returns.⁸⁰
5. Make determinations on the return of children (including unaccompanied or separated children and children accompanied by their parents or other caregivers) in accordance with the principle of the best interests of the child carried out by specifically trained officials and with primary consideration given to the views of the child but also to the views of his or her family or the child's legal guardian or caregiver.⁸¹ This should be determined in a formal procedure containing the necessary safeguards, allowing for the fulfilment of the right of the child to be heard, having assessed all solutions available to the child and incorporated the component of adequate development and survival of the child, taking in to account the socio-economic conditions in the child's country of origin and family environment, and whether there is adequate safe reception in their country of origin.⁸² Returns should not result in children being rendered homeless or housed in orphanages, residential care facilities, or other situations where they may face social exclusion or compromised development.⁸³ These do not constitute adequate safe reception and children should not be returned if these are the only reception options available. Children facing return should be provided competent and independent legal representation, without prejudice to any broader rights of access to legal representation.

6. Ensure that prior to return there is an adequate plan in place for the child's sustainable reintegration and adequate and ongoing post-return evaluation, and that the child will be accompanied throughout the return journey. Ensure the effective reintegration of returning children, from a human rights perspective and through targeted measures which should include effective access to education, health, family life, and protection against all forms of violence and justice.⁸⁴
7. Ensure that families are kept together in the country of residence, rather than the parents being deported without their children, where return has been deemed not to be in the child's best interest.⁸⁵ In cases of separation, states of origin and destination should cooperate to ensure that family tracing efforts continue after return.

8. Grant temporary residence status or other temporary protected status to any migrants who cannot be removed, including those who are refused admission into the territory of their country of origin or habitual residence, or for whom there are practical obstacles to return to their country of origin or residence. Do not hold individuals who are in such situations in indefinite or protracted detention and protect against re-detention.⁸⁶
9. Institute mechanisms for independent human rights monitoring of violations of the principle of non-refoulement, the right to seek asylum, and the prohibition of arbitrary and collective expulsions also after the migrant has been returned. Put in place adequate and on-going mechanisms to monitor the human rights situation of migrants who have been forcibly returned. Ensure that all allegations of human rights violations during return processes are promptly and impartially investigated and that migrants have the right to effective remedies for those violations, regardless of nationality or migration or residence status.⁸⁷

Principle 7:

Protect migrants from all forms of violence and exploitation, whether inflicted by institutions, officials, or by private individuals, entities or groups.

Guidelines:

1. Take preventative measures to protect migrants from violence and exploitation, whether inflicted by State institutions, officials or by private individuals and entities or groups, including provision of measures to ensure the safety and protection of, or safe spaces for, migrants who have been subjected to violence, and special protection measures to prevent reoccurrence or further victimisation.⁸⁸

5. Provide referrals to age- and gender-responsive and culturally-appropriate services including medical, sexual and reproductive healthcare, and psycho-social and other relevant support services to assist in recovery and rehabilitation, appropriate to the human rights violations to which they have been subjected.⁹³ Ensure service providers are trained to understand and respond to the human rights and needs of migrants and their families who have been affected by violence, whether on the basis of their identity or experience as migrants, or/and in combination with other factors, and to overcome any anti-migrant bias.⁹⁴ Ensure appropriately tailored information about protection, services and rights is made available to migrants in a format and language they understand and in an age appropriate manner.
6. Strengthen law enforcement and criminal justice responses to violence against migrants or their families, including through the use of firewalls, to ensure the investigation and prosecution of excessive use of force (including lethal force), any act of violence or violation of the human rights of migrants, regardless of the status or situation of the migrant or whether the alleged perpetrator was acting in a public or private capacity.⁹⁵ Take measures to encourage migrants to report crimes committed against them and ensure clear and binding firewalls between law enforcement and criminal justice actors and immigration enforcement authorities to ensure migrants are able to report crimes against them, participate in criminal justice proceedings and access related assistance and support, and are not deterred from doing so due to fears of arrest, detention and expulsion on the basis of their migration status.⁹⁶

Principle 8:

Uphold the right of migrants to liberty and prohibition of arbitrary detention through making targeted efforts to end immigration detention of migrants. Never detain children on account of their migration status or that of their parents.

Guidelines:

1. Establish a presumption against immigration detention in law.⁹⁷
2. Work towards progressively ending all forms of immigration detention.⁹⁸ Until then, ensure that immigration detention is only ordered by a court of law as an exceptional and last resort measure determined on a case-by-case basis and implemented in line with international human rights law and its procedural safeguards. These must include respect for due process of law, access to legal counsel and fair trial guarantees, and ensuring detention is not mandatory, of limited scope and duration, necessary and proportionate, with no suitable non-custodial available to meet the legitimate aim.⁹⁹ The reasons for detention must be clearly defined in

6. Develop national plans to end immigration detention and to implement human rights-compliant, non-custodial, community-based alternatives to detention based on an ethic of care, not enforcement.¹¹¹ Legislation should include the obligation of administrative or judicial bodies to start from liberty as the first alternative and only if that is rejected for clear, articulated reason consider human rights-based alternatives to detention – one by one – including the obligation of provide adequate arguments at each step why each option is not applicable in the particular case.

7. Ensure accountability and remedy for any instances of unlawful or arbitrary detention, deficiencies in detention standards and any violations or abuse of the human rights of detained migrants, or the use of the threat of detention as extortion for money or sex, by State actors and private individuals, entities or security forces.¹¹² Cooperate with independent monitoring of all places of deprivation of liberty including by competent international organisations and civil society.¹¹³

Principle 9:

Ensure the widest protection of the family unity of migrants, facilitating family reunification, and preventing arbitrary or unlawful interference in the right of migrants to the enjoyment of private and family life.

Guidelines:

1. Develop measures to ensure the non-separation of migrant families, including in disembarkation and border control processing, reception and registration processes, as well as in the context of potential detention and deportation of parents. Make all efforts to trace and reunite unaccompanied or separated children with their parents, in accordance with the principle of the best interests of the child, noting that reunification in the country of origin may not be in the child's best interests. Family reunification should never be used to justify expedited return processes. Ensure that children enjoy the right to express their views freely in all matters affecting them, in particular concerning decisions about their possible return to the family, the views of the child being given due weight in accordance with his or her age and maturity.¹¹⁴

2. Take positive measures, both at the domestic level and in cooperation with other States, to facilitate the unity or reunification of families, in either origin, transit or destination according to the best interests of the child, particularly when family members are separated for political, economic or similar reasons.¹¹⁵ Simplify and speed-up procedures, without compromising standards, to make it easier for children to reunite with their families. Enhance regular channels for family reunification without discrimination or undue restrictions such as age, income, or language.
3. Ensure family registration and reunification processes recognise that various forms of family exist and do not practice gendered, heteronormative, or other stereotyped or prejudicial assumptions in registering family representatives.¹¹⁶
4. Ensure, through legal assistance and judicial and administrative protection, that parents who have been deported from a State are able to exercise their right to family unity and custody of their children, including those who have citizenship of the State, before the courts of that country.¹¹⁷
5. Ensure that families with children are accommodated together as a unit in safe and child friendly environments. Maintaining family unity should never form the justification for the detention of children whose parents/guardians are detained; alternatives to detention should instead be applied to the entire family.¹¹⁸

Principle 10:

Guarantee the human rights of all children in the context of migration, and ensure that they are treated as children first and foremost.

1. Ensure policy, practice and guidance on migrant children and other children affected by migration are based on international law, in particular the principles of non-discrimination and the best interests of the child and the full participation of all children in the context of migration as primary stakeholders.¹¹⁹ Provide migrant children with opportunities to express their views freely in all matters affecting them and to have their views taken into account in accordance with their age and maturity. Ensure that children in the context of migration are treated first and foremost as children and that the principle of the child's best interest takes precedence over migration management objectives or other administrative considerations.¹²⁰
2. In case of reasonable doubt regarding the age of a migrant, provide multidisciplinary age determination procedures which draw on assessments by psychologists, social workers, or qualified others, in a safe, child- and gender-responsive manner with due respect for human dignity and a presumption in favour of the child in situations of ambiguity. Ensure equal standards of protection are provided to all children regardless of age.¹²¹ Return and detention should be suspended while age-assessment takes place.
3. In all cases involving children, ensure screening of child migrants is conducted by a child protection officer, and not an immigration/border enforcement officer, with immediate referral to child protection experts for further screening, interviewing and referral. All children (and families with children) should be provided with qualified legal representation, appropriate material and reception conditions, and full access to procedures to resolve their situation in accordance with the best interests of the child principle.
4. Provide unaccompanied and separated migrant children with special protection and assistance.¹²² Ensure that unaccompanied children are accommodated in separate reception facilities from adults.¹²³ Establish or strengthen qualified and independent guardianship mechanisms to ensure they are promptly appointed to give the necessary assistance to all unaccompanied and separated children and/or child-headed households as soon as they are identified.¹²⁴ Work on national implementation plans to assign qualified and trained guardians, including with respect to cultural identity issues, to unaccompanied and separated children.

5. Ensure the effective provision of free birth registration for all children in the context of migration, irrespective of the migration or residence status of their parent/s or other guardians.¹²⁵
6. Coordinate child protection policies and systems internally and across borders that are in full compliance with international human rights law and ensure that response teams are trained in good practices such as child-friendly communication, with an adequate number of trained child protection officers at all stages of the migration journey.¹²⁶ Ensure that national child protection systems, in their design and implementation, take into account the distinctive needs and views of child migrants and children born to migrant parents.
7. Provide guidance based on international law and best practice to national officials and child protection officers on the practical operationalization of the principle of the best interests of the child for all cases involving migrant children who may not be making a claim for asylum under the 1951 Convention.¹²⁷
8. Ensure to the maximum extent possible the survival and physical, mental, spiritual, moral and social development of migrant children and children of migrants, keeping in mind that the principle of the best interests of the child encompasses short-, medium- and long-term effects of actions related to the development of the child over time and factors including the migration status and inclusion of the child's parents, legal guardians, or family members can contribute to the situation of vulnerability for the optimal development of children in the context of migration.¹²⁸

Principle 11:

Protect the human rights of migrant women and girls.

Guidelines:

1. Ensure legislation, policy and programming is designed to meet the particular needs and rights of migrant women and girls. Provide adequately trained women case workers, lawyers, interviewers and independent interpreters and ensure childcare is made available during the interviews to ensure women are able to present their situation and any claim for human rights protection claims in a safe, culturally-appropriate and gender-responsive environment. Ensure women's reports of human rights abuses are not treated through the lens of male experiences.¹²⁹
2. In all reception and any other centres for migrants, ensure women and girls are not discriminated against in asset allocation and control over resources, with processes adequately addressing the gendered needs of migrants and women staff present wherever women or girls are accommodated. Provide well-lit, safe and private gender-friendly WASH (water, sanitation and hygiene) facilities.¹³⁰
3. Ensure the availability of women's protection and information point persons at all sites to support women and girl migrants who have experienced trauma including sexual and gender-based violence to access specialised medical and psychosocial support, sexual and reproductive health services and information, safe spaces including mother/baby-friendly spaces, and women's shelters that are linguistically and culturally appropriate.¹³¹ Establish multi-purpose

4. Provide training, monitoring and supervision of Government agents and private sector actors to ensure border police and immigration officials are adequately equipped, trained, supervised and monitored for non-discriminatory practices and responsiveness to the gender-specific needs and human rights of women and girl migrants.¹³³
5. Ensure a robust gender analysis of the differential impacts of migration policies and programmes on migrants of all genders and ages, including those regarding access to visas, residence permits, employment, and labour rights. Give special attention to the ways in which women and girls are understood only as victims in need of protection as this can be used to justify restricting the mobility of women and girls on the mistaken premise that this is a means of protection.¹³⁴ Review and amend any gender discriminatory restrictions on migration in law or practice that limit opportunities for women and girls or that do not recognise their capacity and autonomy to make their own decisions.¹³⁵ Ensure gender equity in relevant policies including those regarding access to residence permits, employment, and labour rights.

6. Employ a gender lens through all stages and all aspects of the response to situations of mixed and/or large movements of migrants, including specific consideration of gender in the context of bilateral and multilateral agreements, detention, deportation as well as return or expulsion.¹³⁶
7. Involve a cross-section of women migrants of different nationalities and including adolescent girls, women-headed households, pregnant women, women with disabilities, and other women and girls in drafting and regularly reviewing laws, policies and programmes to ensure they are adequate to their needs and human rights.¹³⁷

Principle 12:

Ensure the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health of all migrants.

Guidelines:

1. Ensure health systems are inclusive and create legal and administrative mechanisms that make this a reality in practice. Clearly reject the use of migration status as a basis to exclude people from accessing health care in the public system. Promote migrant-responsive health policies and programme interventions that can provide equitable, affordable and acceptable access to essential health promotion, disease prevention, access to medicines, and good quality care for migrants, regardless of status.¹³⁸ Ensure national plans of action on health are inclusive of migrants regardless of status.
2. Provide timely and accurate information on migrants' health issues, access to health services including primary health, and their health rights. This should include information on sexual and reproductive health services, access to water, sanitation, and food, and rehabilitative as well as

3. Provide access to rights-based health services, and ensure that necessary health and social services are delivered to migrants in a gender-responsive, culturally and linguistically appropriate way without stigma, through advocacy and the provision of cultural mediators; and by enforcing, when necessary, laws and regulations that prohibit discrimination. These health facilities, goods, services and conditions should include clinical diagnosis, treatment and health promotion, and timely vaccinations for children¹⁴⁰, tailored to the needs of migrants and in line with human rights standards of non-discrimination, non-stigmatizing, voluntary testing, informed consent, adequate pre- and post-test counselling, confidentiality and privacy.¹⁴¹ They should also be linked to accessing and continuing treatment, care and support.
4. Provide access to rights-based, comprehensive and integrated sexual and reproductive health information and services, including, inter alia, menstrual hygiene products, safe and effective methods of modern contraception; emergency contraception; maternal health care including emergency obstetric services, pre- and post-natal care; safe and accessible abortion care; prevention, treatment, care and support for sexually transmitted infections including HIV, and specialised care for survivors of sexual violence and abuse.¹⁴² Provide, as a priority, a minimum initial service package for reproductive health.¹⁴³

5. Any HIV testing offered should be conducted in a voluntary manner, with pre-and post-test counselling, informed consent and in privacy; results should be confidential. There should be no negative consequences of testing HIV positive such as expulsion, restriction of freedom of movement, or denial of access to care, as these represent a violation of rights and do not serve public health objectives.¹⁴⁴
6. Develop strategies to ensure adequate information and adherence and continuity of care, especially during mobility, for the management of long-term or chronic health needs.¹⁴⁵
7. Recognise migrants may have particular and often urgent mental health needs and ensure access to culturally-appropriate and gender-responsive mental health care, including at reception and through referrals to appropriate secondary services. Ensure children, both accompanied and unaccompanied, have access to specific care and psychological support, which takes into account that they experience very high stress levels and have lower coping levels.

Principle 13:

Safeguard the right of migrants to an adequate standard of living.

Guidelines:

1. Make provisions for the access of migrants, including in temporary locations including reception facilities, to an adequate standard of living for themselves and their families, including adequate safe food and nutrition in a quantity and quality sufficient to satisfy an individual's dietary needs and culturally acceptable, potable water and sanitation, clothing and adequate housing. Ensure these are accessible to all migrants including migrants with disabilities and pregnant, new and breastfeeding mothers.¹⁴⁹ Provide a standard of living adequate for the development of migrant children and the children of migrants.¹⁵⁰
2. Ensure migrants have access to shelter with sufficient facilities to meet their needs including their right to privacy and adequate to protect them from threats to their safety.¹⁵¹ Ensure migrants are included in national plans of action on housing, regardless of status.¹⁵²

3. Ensure any evictions or planned relocation of migrants considered to be justified are carried out in strict compliance with the relevant provisions of international human rights law, with the full, prior and informed consent of those being evicted, and in accordance with general principles of reasonableness and proportionality. Ensure that migrants are not subjected to forced eviction and are provided an effective remedy if their rights are violated.¹⁵³
4. Develop procedures and standards to establish clear and binding firewalls between public or private service providers, public or private housing providers, and immigration enforcement authorities and ensure that irregular migrants, or private actors who facilitate them exercising their right to an adequate standard of living, are not criminalised.¹⁵⁴ Ensure migrants are able to access homelessness shelters regardless of status.¹⁵⁵
5. Ensure facilities do not restrict the day-to-day movements of migrants unnecessarily, and that migrants are not unwillingly hosted, accommodated in closed shelter facilities operated by State or non-State actors, or jails or migration detention centres. This includes the de-facto restriction of movement, in particular of women, child, or LGBTI migrants or migrants with a disability, due to fear of sexual, gender-based or other violence inside or outside the facility.

Principle 14:

2. Ensure equality of treatment and non-discrimination of migrants with nationals and among all workers without distinction in respect of the terms and conditions of employment, including wages, rights in the workplace, social dialogue including trade union rights, recognition of skills and qualifications, and social protection.¹⁵⁸ Ensure migrants are not discriminated against on the basis of occupation, recognising that many migrants, especially women migrants, are restricted to work in the informal economy and are often excluded from legal protection under national labour laws and from national statistics and legal protection.¹⁵⁹
3. Strengthen or make provision for adequate supervision by the competent labour market authorities/duly authorized bodies, such as labour inspection services, of working conditions for migrants. Establish effective complaints mechanisms to ensure that workers, regardless of nationality, migration or residence status, are able to take complaints against their employers, and access remedies including unpaid wages and compensation for violations of labour rights. Ensure unrestricted and effective access to judicial remedies and reparation for violations of their rights in the workplace without fear of reprisals and expulsions, and regardless of their migration status. Ensure these mechanisms are not used to check the migration status of workers by establishing and publicising clear and binding firewalls between complaints

Principle 15:

Protect the right of migrants to education, including primary and secondary education as well as higher education and vocational and language training.

Guidelines:

1. Develop procedures, mechanisms and partnerships to ensure the access of all migrant children, including separated and unaccompanied children, as well as children in irregular status or children whose parents or guardians are in irregular status, to adequate and appropriate education at all levels, on the basis of equality of treatment with nationals and with primary education free of charge for all.¹⁶² All aspects of education should be provided on a non-

6. Develop and implement national plans of action on education and training that are inclusive of migrant students, without discrimination. Provide targeted training to teaching personnel at all levels and forms of education with the objective of fostering respect for cultural diversity.

Principle 16:

Uphold migrants' right to information through ensuring they are provided accessible, reliable, relevant and accurate information on their situation and rights.

Guidelines:

1. Provide migrants with reliable, relevant and accurate information on their situation, rights and how to avail themselves of such rights promptly, in a language they understand and in accessible formats.¹⁶⁸ Ensure the provision of child-friendly information in age-appropriate language and formats for migrant children.
2. Ensure that migrants enjoy freedom to seek, receive and impart information.¹⁶⁹ Make every effort to ensure migrants' easy, prompt, effective and practical access to accurate and reliable news and information through any media of their choice about their rights, situation, and practical matters.¹⁷⁰
3. Develop and implement information campaigns based on consultation with affected individuals and communities to ensure that such information is targeted to protecting human rights and promoting safe alternatives to dangerous migration routes, helping individuals and their families in making informed individual decisions rather than solely focused on promoting an agenda intending to prevent movement.¹⁷¹ Ensure information campaigns targeted at migrants do not foster an anti-migrant environment.
4. Provide access to the internet as a tool for migrants to exercise their human rights including the right to seek, receive and impart information and ideas of all kind, regardless of frontiers, and through any media of their choice.¹⁷² This should include new forms of information-sharing migrants are using to navigate their journeys, stay in contact with families, and share their experiences, including to safely report gender-based and sexual violence. Ensure migrants are able to retain and use their communication equipment at reception centres.

5. Ensure migrants' privacy online is protected as part of the realization of their right to information and in line with the protection of personal data. Commit to not tracking or collecting, storing or sharing data of migrants' journeys, location data, or communications through their use of digital technologies and media, or that of those providing assistance to migrants or reporting on the situation, to limit their human rights.¹⁷³
6. Ensure greater protection for all media professionals, citizen-journalists and journalistic sources to promote a safe and enabling environment for journalists to perform their work reporting accurately on large or mixed movements independently and without undue interference. End impunity for attacks on media professionals.¹⁷⁴

Principle 17:

Guarantee monitoring and accountability in all responses to large and/or mixed movements of migrants, including through protecting the right of migrants to appropriate and effective remedies.

Guidelines:

1. Establish or strengthen independent internal and external mechanisms to monitor the human rights impact of laws, policies and practices taken in response to or implemented in the context

2. Ensure the accountability of State and non-State actors including private companies and military contractors involved in the response to large and/or mixed movements of migrants, such as those involved in search and rescue, implementing entry restriction measures such as pre-departure screening and decisions on access to transportation, providing services to migrants, or operating detention facilities.¹⁷⁶
3. Ensure and facilitate unrestricted access of independent monitoring bodies, including national human rights institutions, ombudspersons, national preventive mechanisms and other relevant bodies to locations, including places of detention, and information required to effectively monitor human rights of migrants.¹⁷⁷ Enable civil society actors working with migrants to participate in monitoring and evaluating the human rights impact of governance measures. Share this information with the United Nations human rights treaty-monitoring bodies and special procedures and through the Universal Periodic Review process.¹⁷⁸ Ensure that mechanisms are put in place to implement recommendations by the national and international monitoring bodies.

Principle 18:

Respect and support the activities of human rights defenders and others working to rescue and provide assistance to migrants.

Guidelines:

1. Provide a safe, accessible and enabling environment in which individuals and organizations working to support migrants can operate.¹⁸² Ensure that the promotion and the protection of the human rights of migrants are not criminalised, and that human rights defenders are not prevented from enjoying human rights owing to their work, whether they operate individually or in association with others, while emphasizing that everyone shall respect the human rights of others.¹⁸³
2. Develop and put in place sustainable public policies or programmes that support and protect human rights defenders at all stages of their work in a comprehensive manner.¹⁸⁴ Ensure legislation affecting the activities of human rights defenders, including any legislation and procedures governing the registration and funding of civil society organisations, is consistent with international human rights law.¹⁸⁵ This includes ensuring legislation designed to guarantee public safety and public order contains clearly defined provisions consistent with international human rights law, including the principle of non-discrimination, and that such legislation to impede or restrict the exercise of any human right or impose any limitations on the work and activities of human rights defenders.¹⁸⁶

3. Take all necessary measures to ensure the protection of human rights defenders working with migrants, individually and in association with others, against any violence, threats, retaliation including threats of deportation, de facto or de jure adverse discrimination, pressure or any other arbitrary action, by State or non-State actors, as a consequence of their human rights work.¹⁸⁷
4. End impunity by investigating and pursuing accountability for all attacks and threats by State and non-State actors against any individual, group or organ of society that is defending migrants' human rights, including against family members, associates and legal representatives, and by condemning publically all cases of violence, discrimination, intimidation and reprisals against them and provide effective compensation mechanisms to the defenders.¹⁸⁸
5. Adopt or revise and implement national legal frameworks to protect any person who discloses information that they reasonably believe, at the time of disclosure, to be true and to constitute a threat or harm to a specified public interest, such as a violation of national or international law, abuse of authority, waste, fraud or harm to the environment, public health or public safety. Ensure there are adequate internal institutional and external oversight mechanisms to provide effective and protective channels for such persons to motivate investigation and redress of the alleged wrongdoing.¹⁸⁹

6. Express public support for the important role of human rights defenders and the legitimacy of their work, including by condemning, including publicly, all cases of violence and discrimination against migrants' human rights defenders, including women human rights defenders, underlining that such practices can never be justified.¹⁹⁰

Principle 19:

Improve the collection of disaggregated data on the human rights situation of migrants, while ensuring the right to privacy and protection of personal data.

Guidelines:

1. Produce and support qualitative research on migrants' experiences, with their consent and voluntary participation, to inform gender-responsive, human rights-based policies. Research should extend to the causes of, and decision-making of people in, these movements. Data should be permanently and irreversibly anonymised to ensure its use does not compromise privacy rights and that it cannot be used for immigration enforcement purposes.¹⁹¹
2. Work towards collating and sharing rights-based disaggregated data on migrants in vulnerable situations. Strengthen measures to collect specific data on the number, age and gender of migrants crossing maritime, land or air borders, including those who are killed, missing, injured, or victims of crime while attempting these crossings, to measure trends and raise awareness on risks.¹⁹² Prioritise the collection of quantitative and qualitative rights-based disaggregated data and indicators on immigration detention, and on the alternatives applied and the reasons for applying them and discounting other options.
3. Gather data on complaints, investigations, prosecutions, and convictions of all instances of human rights violations perpetrated by State or non-State actors against migrants, with a view to sanctioning and preventing such abuses.¹⁹³
4. Disaggregate data on the human rights situation of migrants by age and gender as well as other grounds as relevant, such as migratory status, disability, sexual orientation or gender identity, and/or minority status.¹⁹⁴

5. Work collaboratively to develop international standardised approaches for monitoring indicators on and variables relating to migrants' human rights in order to obtain reliable statistical data on international migration. This data should inform the design of evidence-based policy- and decision-making in all relevant aspects of sustainable development and migration policy.¹⁹⁵
6. Ensure research and data collection methodologies are firmly grounded in ethical principles, including an understanding of the need not to re-traumatize or otherwise harm migrants, as well as international standards and principles for the protection of personal data.¹⁹⁶ Ensure digital biometric technologies are never used to facilitate hi-tech forms of racial and gender profiling, increase vulnerability to surveillance, or are otherwise used, stored or processed in a way that can cause risks to individuals.¹⁹⁷
7. Monitor collection of all data on migrants (including biometric data) to ensure it is obtained lawfully, stored, transferred and disposed of in accordance with international standards and best practice guidelines on data protection and privacy.¹⁹⁸ Personal data, including biometrics data, needs to be handled in a confidential manner and be subject to a high level of data security to prevent unauthorized access, loss, or damage.

Principle 20:

Build capacity and promote cooperation amongst and between all relevant stakeholders to ensure a gender-responsive and human rights-based approach to migration governance and to understand and address the drivers of the movement of migrants in a vulnerable situation.

Guidelines:

1. Establish or strengthen multi-stakeholder partnerships and cooperation including with national human rights institutions, intergovernmental organisations, international organisations, donors, civil society organisations including migrants' associations, women's organisations, trade unions,

2. Cooperate in enhancing national and collective responses that are sound, equitable, humane, sustainable, and age-, gender- and disability-responsive, and that address the reasons people leave their homes, their need for safe passage and protection and both the immediate and long-term needs and rights of those who cross into other countries.²⁰¹ Enhance sufficient, accessible and safe migration pathways, through both extraordinary and permanent avenues, and promote holistic approaches that take into account the demand for such pathways that come both from receiving societies as well as the necessity for migrants to reunite with family and seek protection of their rights.²⁰²

3. Promote international cooperation to develop a holistic and sustainable rights-based approach to address the root causes and drivers of large and/or mixed movements of migrants. Ensure that all responses to manage or mitigate such drivers, including root causes related to the adverse consequences of climate change and environmental degradation, are carried out in accordance with international human rights law and standards in order to facilitate migration with dignity and to avoid human rights violations. Ensure the meaningful participation of migrants or potential migrants in all deliberations regarding their future.²⁰³
4. Consider regularising the situation of migrants in irregular status within a reasonable period of time as the most effective measure to address the needs of and secure the rights of migrants in vulnerable situations.²⁰⁴
5. 6. Improve knowledge, build capacity and sensitize media professionals and outlets on the situation and human rights of migrants in all their diversity.²⁰⁶ Provide targeted training to media professionals and journalists with emphasis on the elimination of stereotypes and the recognition of the value of cultural diversity.
7. Ensure that migration policy-making at the national, as well as at the regional level, is subjected at all times to parliamentary scrutiny and rendered transparent and accountable by making the outcomes, including bilateral agreements, readmission agreements and Memoranda of Understanding, public.²⁰⁷ Ensure international cooperation is always premised on the obligation to respect, protect and fulfil the human rights of migrants and never conditional on measures that prioritize the restriction or containment of migration.

Annex: International Law informing the Principles

The Principles on the Human Rights Protection of Migrants in Vulnerable Situations within Large and/or Mixed Movements are derived directly from international law. The extracts listed below are further supplemented by various general comments of the international human rights law treaty bodies, UN resolutions and international and regional case law that are not listed here for reasons of space.

Principle 1: Ensure that human rights are at the centre of addressing large and/or mixed movements of migrants, regardless of their status

NORMATIVE FRAMEWORK

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in its Articles 1 and 2, outlines the fundamental norm that all human beings shall enjoy fundamental rights and freedoms without distinction of any kind.²⁰⁸

Article 1(3) on “Purpose of UN Charter” of the Charter of the United Nations, ‘To achieve international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion’.²⁰⁹ See also Article 55 (c) the UN Charter.

Article 2 of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights, *‘Every individual shall be entitled to the enjoyment of the rights and freedoms recognized and guaranteed in the present Charter without distinction of any kind such as race, ethnic group, color, sex, language, religion, political or any other opinion, national and social origin, fortune, birth or other status.’*²¹⁸

Article 3 of the League of Arab States, Arab Charter on Human Rights, *‘There will be no restriction of any basic human right which is recognised or existent in any State party to this Charter, by virtue of law, treaties or custom. Nor may [these rights] be derogated from under the pretext that they have not been recognised in this Charter, or recognised to a lesser degree. No State party to this Charter shall derogate from the basic freedoms contained in [this Charter] and from which the citizens of another state benefit, which affords those freedoms to a lesser degree’*²¹⁹

NORMATIVE FRAMEWORK

According to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, ‘Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty’ (Article 2). Then, in particular, Article 7 sets out that anyone is *‘[...] entitled to equal protection against any discrimination in violation of this Declaration and against any incitement to such discrimination’*²²⁰

The core UN human rights treaties enshrine a provision on the principle of non-discrimination, which guarantees that every right that the Convention provides for shall apply to every person without any

Principle 5: Ensure that all border governance measures protect the human right to freedom of movement and the right of all persons to leave any country including their own, recognising that States have legitimate interests in exercising immigration controls

Under Article 13 of the UN General Assembly, Universal Declaration of Human Rights, ‘*Everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each state. Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country’.*²⁵⁵

UN General Assembly, International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Article 12 (1 and 2) ‘*Everyone lawfully within the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose his residence. Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own’.*²⁵⁶

With Article 5 the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination dictates that States Parties to the convention should guarantee that everyone, without discrimination of any type, enjoys ‘The right to freedom of movement and residence within the border of the State’ and ‘The right to leave any country, including one's own, and to return to one's country’. Equally, States shall ensure that ‘The above-mentioned rights shall not be subject to any restrictions except those which are provided by law, are necessary to protect national security, public order (ordre public), public health or morals or the rights and freedoms of others, and are consistent with the other rights recognized in the present Covenant” and that “*No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of the right to enter his own country’.*²⁵⁷

See Article 8 (1) of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families, ‘*Migrant workers and members of their families shall be free to leave any State, including their State of origin. See Article 22 “Freedom of Movement and Residence” of the Organization of American States (OAS), American Convention on Human Rights, ‘Every person lawfully in the territory of a State Party has the right to move about in it, and to reside in it subject to the provisions of the law. Every person has the right to leave any country freely, including his own. The exercise of the foregoing rights may be restricted only pursuant to a law to the extent necessary in a democratic society to prevent crime or to protect national security, public safety, public order, public morals, public health, or the rights or freedoms of others. The exercise of the rights recognized in paragraph 1 may also be restricted by law in designated zones for reasons of public interest. No one can be expelled from the territory of the state of which he is a national or be deprived of the right to enter it. An alien lawfully in the territory of a State Party to this Convention may be expelled from it only pursuant to a decision reached in accordance with law. Every person has the right to seek and be granted asylum in a foreign territory, in accordance with the legislation of the state and international conventions, in the event he is being pursued for political offenses or related common crimes. In no case may an alien be deported or returned to a country, regardless of whether or not it is his country of origin, if in that country his right to life or personal freedom is in danger of being violated because of his race, nationality, religion, social status, or political opinions. The collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited’.²⁶⁵

Article 12 (1,2,3) of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights, ‘Every individual shall have the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of a State provided he abides by the law. Every individual shall have the right to leave any country including his own, and to return to his country. This right may only be subject to restrictions, provided for by law for the protection of national security, law and order, public health or morality. Every individual shall have the right, when persecuted, to seek and obtain asylum in other countries in accordance with laws of those countries and international conventions’.²⁶⁶

Under Article 4 of the League of Arab States, Arab Charter on Human Rights, it is prohibited to impose limitations on the rights and freedoms. ‘Limitations or derogations in case of public emergencies shall not affect the return to [one's] country. Moreover, under Article 21 ‘Citizens shall not be arbitrarily or illegally deprived from leaving any Arab country, including their own [...]’.²⁶⁷

Principle 6: Ensure that all returns, deportations, removals and readmissions are only carried out in full respect for the human rights of migrants and in accordance with international law, including upholding the principle of non-refoulement, the prohibition of arbitrary or collective expulsion, the right to private and family life, the best interests of the child, as well as the right to seek asylum

Principle 7: Protect migrants from all forms of violence and exploitation, whether inflicted by institutions, officials, or by private individuals, entities or groups

NORMATIVE FRAMEWORK

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights prohibits slavery or servitude as well as torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (Articles 4 and 5).²⁸²

According to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights everyone has the right to security of person (Article 9.1), and 'No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. In particular, no one shall be subjected without his free consent to medical or scientific experimentation' (Article 7).²⁸³

See the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, in particular Article 2 (1) which affirms that 'Each State Party shall take effective legislative, administrative, judicial or other measures to prevent acts of torture in any territory under its jurisdiction'.²⁸⁴

According to Article 5(b) International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, States Parties undertake to prohibit and to eliminate racial discrimination in all its forms and to guarantee 'The right to security of person and protection by the State against violence or bodily harm, whether inflicted by government officials or by any individual group or institution'.²⁸⁵

According to Article 19(1) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, States Parties shall take all appropriate national, bilateral and multilateral measures to protect the child from all forms of violence, abuses, maltreatment or exploitation, such as: sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, sale or trafficking, forms of exploitation prejudicial to any aspects of the child's welfare, torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.²⁸⁶ See also, Articles 34, 35, 36, 37 of the Convention and the Optional Protocols on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and on the involvement of children in armed conflict.

Article 6 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, imposes on States Parties to *'take all appropriate measures, including legislation, to suppress all forms of traffic in women and exploitation of prostitution of women.'*²⁸⁷

The International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families, Article 10 'No migrant worker or member of his or her family shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.' and Article 11 (1,2 and 3) "No migrant worker or member of his or her family shall be held in slavery or servitude. No migrant worker or member of his or her family shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour. Paragraph 2 of the present article shall not be held to preclude, in States where imprisonment with hard labour may be imposed as a punishment for a crime, the performance of hard labour in pursuance of a sentence to such punishment by a competent court'. And Article 16 (2) "Migrant workers and members of their families shall be entitled to effective protection by the State against violence, physical injury, threats and intimidation, whether by public officials or by private
